

STEPHEN TREBILCOCK

Stephen Trebilcock was born in Montacute in the Adelaide Hills, and spent most of his childhood in the small community of Winkie on the River Murray. His works are strongly influenced by his early years living on a fruit block and his love of gardening. Stephen is a self-taught painter and his approach to painting is strongly based on his drawing skills, developed over years of careful observation and study.

Stephen held his first solo exhibition in 1990 with the Hill Smith Gallery in South Australia, where he continues to be represented. In 1993 he was awarded a travelling scholarship to Europe, where he completed a course of study at the Slade School of Art in London.

From a childhood surrounded by orchards, it is the introduced European fruits and vegetables and Australian native flora that captures Stephen's attention. His images possess a biblical abundance, whilst noting also the imperfections or blemishes that reflect the reality of everyday life. The attributes of these engaging images are the rich palette, robust forms and textured paintwork that animate his vision. As a vegetarian and passionate horticulturalist, this is Stephen's milieu; painting and life are closely intertwined. In a wider context, his paintings reflect a set of values and a way of life many desire today, a life perhaps of a bygone era which was more approachable and honest.
